

Deep affection honey come back to me

Chapter: 571

Hesitation

Cali was stunned again.

Ivy didn't notice it, but still talking, "I think I'm thinking too much. I heard that Mr. Sean was specially hired to protect the two young masters of Princess Nina, and it's natural for him to be good to Princess Nina.

Princess Nina and Count Nangong love each other very much. They always show their affection to each other in front of us. Alas, I'm so envious of them, and..."

She was so jealous.

Ivy didn't dare to say the last sentence, so she shut up.

Cali suddenly asked, "Do they love each other?"

"Of course they do." Ivy didn't want to admit it, but she had to.

It suddenly occurred to Cali that there was an online analysis post after the press conference of Count Nangong. At that time, she only felt it ridiculous when she took a glance at it. Someone said that Princess Nina and Count Nangong were just acting to be intimate.

She didn't hesitate to scold the writer who lost their mind and dared to write anything.

Now she thought about it and believed that the writer's analysis was right.

In fact, the one who had always been initiative was Count Nangong, and Princess Nina had rarely taken the initiative.

me back after he finishes the mission I gave him."

"How long?"

"With your brother's and Bryant's abilities, it will take about three years."

"Three years." Nina was worried that Mimi couldn't afford the expense. She would secretly help her when she returned to Lexingport City.

All of a sudden, the idea made her relieve.

"What's wrong?" Anne was a little confused, but she seemed to have figured it out herself. "Don't worry about him. He is more comfortable outside than at home."

Nina whispered, "Yes, he's more comfortable, but he doesn't have money."

"How could he not have money?" Anne shook her head and sighed, "You believe whatever your brother says. You have never thought about being cheated."

Nina's eyes lit up. "Is my brother actually rich?"

"It's just not as rich as being at home." Anne felt a little wronged. Why did everyone think that she didn't give Leon a penny?

She didn't say that all the money was used for investment.

Feeling wronged, queen Anne left. She thought she might need some comfort and went straight to her husband.

Nina was left alone, wondering why her brother pretended to be poor when he was rich.

After thinking for a while, Nina stopped thinking and went back to her room.

Rebecca was taking care of Van and Don. When she saw Nina come in, she greeted Nina respectfully, "Princess Nina."

"Did Van and Don have cried in the past two days?" Nina walked to the crib, kissed Van's little hand first and then kissed Don's little hand.

Van and Don immediately smiled.

Rebecca said, "With the company of Count Nangong, they didn't make much noise. Sometimes they would cry. They would be fine after Count Nangong coaxed them for a while."

"Good kids. Come here and hug me." Nina stretched out her hand to hold Van, and Don suddenly began to babble for favor.

"Don, be a good boy, I'll hold you soon." Nina put Van back and turned to hold Don.

When the baby was in her mother's arms, his soft little hand put on the face of Nina, and he babbled even more.

"Don, you must be a naughty boy when you grow up." Nina patted Don on the buttock and looked down at Van, who was lying quietly on the crib and looking at her with his big eyes.

"Fortunately, Van is so quiet. If both of them make trouble, I'm afraid they would turn the whole family upside down when ow can I pretend not to know?"

"I don't know. I still can't believe that one of the couples who frequently show love has an affair." Lynda said.

Cali sighed helplessly, "I can't believe it, okay? Lynda! Can you give me an idea? How about I'll have a talk with Princess Nina and let her make it clear to Count Nangong? If possible, they can divorce peacefully."

"No, Cali! Aren't you afraid that Princess Nina will hurt you?" Lynda stopped her emotionally.

"Impossible Princess Nina is not that kind of person. She won't do that." Cali firmly believed.

"Well, it's up to you. I have something to do," said Lynda.

Cali was confused. "What are you busy with at night?"

"Nothing. It's just about work. I can't help you with this. It's up to you." Lynda said it vaguely.

"I just can't make a decision..."

"Well, it's not a big deal. I have to go."

"Lynda..."

Lynda hung up the phone.

After hanging up the phone in a hurry, Lynda sat at the desk and took a few deep breaths. She held the phone tightly as if she had grasped a life-saving straw, and her palms were sweating.

Lynda lit up the screen again, and it showed that she was recording.

Being Exposed To Have An Affair In Marriage

The next morning, Nina was awakened by the buzzing sound of her mobile phone.

She reached for the phone and squinted slightly. It was a call from John. She slid the answer key and continued to close her eyes.

"Good morning. Are you here? Can I sleep a few more minutes?" Nina's lazy voice was as lazy as a cat in the morning, and her face rubbed against the pillow, acting like a spoiled child.

After a moment of silence, John said, "Okay. Promise me one thing first. Don't surf the Internet today, okay?"

"Okay, okay." Nina answered sleepily, without thinking about what he meant.

Nina turned over and fell asleep. The public opinion outside had been overturned, and the discussion were higher and higher.

The topic of Princess Nina's infidelity in marriage occupied the top of the hot search list, and there was a lot of abuse below the comment.

"Shit! Princess Nina actually cuckolded Count Nangong? Really?"

"There was the evidence. Could it be fake?"

"Fuck! You bitch!"

"Who is this bodyguard named Sean? Find him out now! How dare he take Princess Nina away Count Nangong? Awesome!"

"He's just a servant. Bullshit!"

"Is Count Nangong not handsome enough or couldn't he content y lash marriage and flash divorce rare? You all think that it was because Princess Nina had an affair with another man that they got divorced. I thought that Count Nangong had changed his mind and the two got divorced."

"It's none of your business. It's their business whether they divorce or not."

"Is it easy to want a divorce? Why not show us the photo of the divorce certificate? Let's see when they got divorced. I'm afraid the divorce date is today, right? Ha-ah."

"Wait for the bankruptcy of the Magnolia Media Company."

"Agreed, go broke now. They always know how to slander others. After they slander the star in the entertainment circle and then the princess, they are awesome. Humph, let's see how long they will be awesome next."

The topic of the divorce between Princess Nina and Count Nangong suppressed the hot topic of Princess Nina's infidelity in marriage, and the online public opinion was also guided by many media.

However, the Magnolia Media Company had become the target of public criticism in an instant. The boss of the Magnolia Media Company could only personally take Lynda to Nangong castle to make an apology, in order to retrieve the situation.

Lynda was dumbfounded.

Punish One As A Warning To Others

play_arrow

The boss of the Magnolia Media Company was called Marcus Zhang. He was more than 30 years old and looked shrewd. Obviously, he was sophisticated.

However, this time, he was in a panic. He had been sweating all the way, thinking hard in panic how to save his company.

'Count Nangong said in person. I couldn't stay in this circle any longer. I only hope that Count Nangong would be magnanimous and not let me go bankrupt to lose everything.

Last night, when I heard the recording, I also had some misgivings. I did think about the possibility of divorce. After investigating for a long time, I found that there was no sign of divorce, so I agreed to release it.

I thought that even if Princess Nina had a strong background, it was she who cheated on Count Nangong first. If Count Nangong knew about it, he would definitely go against her. But I didn't expect that it was Count Nangong who pointed at me instead.'

Marcus was very regretful. 'If it weren't for my greed, it wouldn't have happened if I had handed the recording to Count Nangong first.

But after all, it was this intern named Lynda.

nly be presented to everyone. Then why are you trembling now?"

Marcus almost knelt down when he was slapped. "I really didn't know that you and Princess Nina have divorced."

"It's not your fault."

"Yes, yes." Marcus's eyes lit up.

Vicente smiled. 'I learned from John that I should punish one as a warning to others so that no media would dare to provoke me easily in the future.

Now that Marcus had met into it, it is a good chance to alert those who want to oppose me.'

"But I won't let you go. Just take it as a small punishment and warning, I believe with your strength, you will definitely make a comeback. Well, you have sent her to us. You can go back for the time being."

Kneeling on the ground, Lynda knew that it was her turn to be judged, but she didn't have money or status. 'What would Count Nangong do to me?'

While Lynda was thinking nervously, the voice of Count Nangong suddenly came, but not to her.

"She is here. You can deal with her by yourself." Vicente looked at John, and then looked at Lynda kneeling on the ground with sympathy.

Punish Him To Stand In The Scorching Sun

Then John stood up expressionlessly and came to Lynda. A pair of shiny leather shoes and slender legs appeared in front of Lynda. The invisible pressure made her lips tremble, and she shrank her neck, wishing to hide in a hard shell.

But she didn't have a shell. She was just flesh and blood.

"I'm sorry. I'm so sorry. Please let me go." There was no trace of blood on Lynda's face, and her breath seemed to become weak.

When the man squatted down in front of her, Lynda seemed to have entered the infernal hell, and the eyes of death pierced a hole in her body.

"Which hand pressed the record?" The calmer John's tone was, the creepier it was.

"Right, right hand," answered Lynda, trembling.

"Okay." John said indifferently, "Put it on the ground with your palm facing down."

Lynda didn't know what he was going to do. She only knew that the fear in her body made her dare not to disobey the order, so she stretched out her right hand as he asked.

John picked up the kitchen knife from the table. Vicente didn't dare to see the bloody scene, so he turned around.

Cali's eyes widened. She thought of Dem

It was strange that Rebecca asked someone to send the lunch to the room, saying that they didn't have to have lunch at the same table this noon.

When Nina woke up from her nap, she wanted to push the babies out to bask in the sun and blow the sea wind, but she was stopped by Rebecca.

Nina finally realized that something was wrong.

So Nina pretended to agree, took the opportunity to push away Rebecca, beat the bodyguards at the door and rushed out.

Nina saw that John was standing in the hot sun, sweating profusely, and his lips were dry, as if it was in a field of drought.

"John!" Nina shouted his name. It seemed that John didn't hear it or felt someone calling him, but he didn't dare to move his head for fear of dizziness.

'I didn't know how long it would take before I finished my punishment. Only by holding on could I see my future parents in law.

I had never suffered such a big punishment since I was a child, and now I deserved it.'

Noticing that John was lack of water, Nina rushed down the castle. However, when she rushed to the place where John was, John had already been taken away.

John Is The Most Talented Man In The World

play_arrow

The heat in mid-September was rolling, and Nina stood there for a few seconds, as if she was grilled on a charcoal fire.

'I don't know how long John had stood in the scorching sun.

First, in a daze in the morning, I heard that John told me not to surf the Internet. Then, the entire network of the Scher Mountain was cut off and the signal was blocked. At then, John's lips were slightly pale.'

Nina thought that something must have happened. 'There must be a something related to me on the Internet, so that everyone could hide it from me.'

"Princess Nina, your highness..." Rebecca rushed over with servants.

Nina turned around and walked towards Rebecca, questioning, "What happened this morning? Where is John?"

Rebecca motioned a servant to hold an umbrella. 'I had already made up my mind to answer Princess Nina's question.'

"The queen invited Mr. John to have dinner together tonight."

"Do you think I'm blind? He's almost fainted under the sun. Did the word Invitation meant like this?" Nina said angrily.

Rebecca lowered her eyes respectfully and said unhurriedly, "Princess Nina, you misunderstood me."

'Misunderstood?

She dared to say anything.'

Nina didn't want to talk to her anymore. "Tell me where he is now."

Rebecca looked up and answered, "I don't know." 'I really don't know rink it. Nina insisted on helping him up, but John didn't agree. He just smiled at Nina.

Nina loosened her grip angrily and knelt down.

The three people standing there were all stunned. Vicente opened his mouth worriedly and suddenly smiled gently without interfering.

Anne said angrily, "What are you doing?"

Even Bruce, who had always spoiled his daughter, was angry. He stood in front of Nina and said, "Why are you kneeling? Stand up."

Nina held John's big hands, looked at him with tears in his eyes. "I'm sorry."

"No..." When John wanted to say no, Nina opened her mouth and said, "I know it. It's not his fault alone."

Nina's chest heaved. When she thought of the arrogant man, John, who had always compromised for her, her heart was like a stone, and a crystal tear rolled down from the corner of her eyes.

"Mother, you said that I was the apple of your eyes, do you know that he is also the apple of his family? He is the most talented man in the world."

Nina's eyes were filled with mist.' Even if I couldn't see anything clearly, I have to say it.'

"John is the most talented man in the world! But now for me..."

She tightly grasped the hand of John, and as she lowered her eyes, tears welled up in her eyes. Her voice softened and she said painfully, "For me, he had become like this."

Had To Wait For Another Three Years

play_arrow

Nina's heart continued to sink, and she grabbed John's palm harder and harder.

The well-known Mr. Shi of Lexingport City, the president of Time Group, and the noble young master of Shi family was born to be the god's favored one. Although he was rich enough, he was more hardworking than anyone else. He was decisive in business and held half of Lexingport City.

The god's favored one who was worth hundreds of millions knelt down in front of others.

"Do you know that John has never knelt down even in front of his own father?" Nina wiped her tears.

John reached out his hand to hold Nina's face and wiped away her tears bit by bit with his thumb. The thousands of words in his heart finally turned into two words, "Good girl."

The little girl knew him, protected him. His wife was so perfect that he couldn't expect more.

No matter where and when, John would treat her as a little girl, love her and take care of her.

As long as Nina cried, John's heart would be broken.

"Yes." Nina sobbed, "Of course, I'm not saying you can't kneel down. It's natural for a son in law to kneel down to his parents in law. It's the ceremony in the wedding. Why don't you find a red handkerchief to catch tears?"

John was moved, especially when he heard the last sentence, which sounded like a plea.

It was just that an old father wanted to keep his daughter longer.

John thought that if he and Nina had a daughter, he would be more reluctant to let his daughter marry someone so far away.

Fortunately, the two children were both sons. They didn't have to worry about them being abducted. In the future, they just needed to abduct other people's daughters.

John opened his thin lips and said, "My family are all concerned about Nina and the children. Parents in law, please allow Nina to contact them."

"I didn't say no." Being able to keep her daughter by her side for another three years, Anne was in a good mood and her tone became gentle. "If they want to see the real person, it's not that C Island doesn't welcome them."

With his mother-in-law's words, John suddenly felt that three years weren't that hard for him.

But it was just a sudden feel.

At the thought that he couldn't hold Nina to sleep at night or see Nina every morning after waking up, John felt very depressed.

Other people could get their wife as soon as they chased her, but he had to chase his wife for years.

When John came out, Nina and Vicente were waiting outside the door. When they saw him come out, they hurried to help him back to his room.

John immediately went to the bathroom to take a shower to wash away the smell of sweat and fatigue.

With the babies in their arms, Nina and Vicente were sitting on the sofa on the balcony, enjoying the sea breeze. Someone sent a box to Vicente, and Rebecca took it to them.

"What's in the box?" Nina opened the box with one hand. There was divorce a certificate and a divorce agreement in it.

Nina reached for the divorce certificate, but Vicente said, "There's nothing to look at in the divorce certificate. Have a look at the divorce agreement."

"Let me have a look." Nina opened the divorce agreement and found that Vicente gave her a large sum of money as alimony.

Nina was surprised at Vicente's thoughtfulness and assurance.

"Don't look at me like that. I'm not interested in you." Vicente smiled, "I did this not for you, but for the children. Van and Don are my children nominally. Van, do you think it is right?"

Vicente reached out his hand and pinched Van's face. "If I don't give you the custody, the children can only stay with me. They will probably blame me when they grow up. Maybe meet them." Vicente held the kid's hand and walked forward.

After meeting together, then they went for a walk together.

The two kids withdrew their hands secretly and whispered in each other's ears.

"Don, did mom recognize you?"

"No, she didn't. What do you think? I did a good acting this time, right? Now I am your elder brother! You have to admit it!"

Van didn't do as his younger brother wished, but there were lot of doubts in his big eyes. He looked back at his mother in confusion.

"Can't she really recognize you?"

When Nina saw her son turn around, she quickly said, "Van, walk and see the way. You can look at me clearly when we go home."

"Isn't he Don? The mud on his face was rubbed by me accidentally. I'm going back to wash it for him." Vicente was confused.

Nina smiled, "You have been with the children for four years. Can you make some progress?"

Vicente was shocked, "Was I fooled again?"

Hearing the conversation between the two, Van turned his heads and looked at his younger brother who was jumping far away. He talked to himself, "Don, you were fooled by our mother."

Unaware that, Don, who had been exposed, was still immersed in his flawless performance today.

'I finally deceived my mother.'

On the way, Vicente asked while walking, "It's September now. Three years had passed. When will you go back to the Lexingport City?"

"Are you reluctant to leave me?" Nina raised her eyebrows.

"No, no, no. the ones I am reluctant to leave are Van and Don, not you." Vicente said duplicity.

Without debunk Vicente, Nina nodded, "Yes, yes."

"I remember your wedding will be held at the end of October, right? I have postponed the meeting at the end of October." Vicente said.

"Have you made your choice?"

"What?" Vicente rolled his eyes and looked away.

Nina patted Vicente on the shoulder and said, "Don't pretend. I had printed out the pictures I sent to you. I've just sent them to Mimi and asked her to choose her favorite dress. You'd better pick it quickly so that it can be customized according to your size."

"No. I dare not." Vicente pursed his lips.

Nina comforted Vicente, "Don't be afraid. After putting on your wig and makeup, no one can recognize you. Moreover, you are in the Lexingport City, not in the C Island. What are you afraid of?"

"I'm just afraid." Vicente hadn't worn women's clothes for more than 20 years. Now Vicente suddenly had energy." Nina smiled with relief

The two kids said goodbye to their grandparents and stood aside hand in hand obediently.

Anne walked up to Nina and held her in her arms, and a thousand words had become a word "Nina".

After getting along with her mother for three years, the relationship between the mother and daughter had long been harmonious. Nina knew what her mother wanted to say.

She patted her mother on the back and said, "Mom, I will take good care of myself and won't let myself be wronged."

"Okay." Anne let go of her daughter and smiled.

"My dear daughter, you often call me and your mother by video," said Bruce with a smile.

"I'll take the kids to video chat with you often. Say goodbye to your grandpa and grandma." Nina touched the children's head and said.

"Goodbye, Grandpa and grandma." The two kids waved their hands.

After they got in the car, Vicente drove farther and farther away. They could still see from the rearview mirror that Bruce and Anne were waving their hands. The children went out from home and their parents worried.

Nina didn't tell anyone that she took her children back to the Lexingport City in advance.

Chapter: 580

Call Him Elder Brother If Need Help

At ten o'clock in the morning, at the International Airport in the Lexingport City.

After getting off the plane, the two brothers, Van and Don, walked forward hand in hand. While shaking his hands, Don looked around. His big and bright eyes were full of curiosity about the new environment.

As long as he saw something interesting, he would pull his brother's hand and said in a sweet voice, "My elder brother, look over there!"

Nina wore a black sunglasses which almost covered half of her face. Her red lips were as beautiful as blooming roses, and her wine red slip dress was up to her ankles.

Wearing black high-heeled sandals, she walked behind the children and saw many people stop and watch.

People's eyes were full of the radiance of fatherly love, or the radiance of the maternal love, especially the latter.

The overflowing glow of maternal love made Nina have an illusion that her children were about to be taken away, and the children were happily walking farther and farther away.

Nina called helplessly, "My sons, can you two be a little afraid of a strange environment? Come back."

"Don, mommy called us." Van stopped and pul of them walked forward together.

Don sat on the suitcase and looked around excitedly. "Wow, it is fun. I can see many interesting things on the high place. My dear younger brother, next time it's your turn."

Van held his mother's hand and asked, "Mommy, do we have such a suitcase in our house? My younger brother likes it."

"Yes. You can play by yourselves when you go back." Nina said.

Cherry's mother glanced at the two children and liked them more and more. "Your two children are so beautiful, many times more beautiful than Cherry's brother when he was a child."

At this time, the phone of Cherry's mother rang. She took out her phone and said, "As soon as we talked about my son, my son called me. My son must have been waiting outside for a long time and called. Hello, my dear son."

"Hi, where are you? Why didn't I see you?"

Standing next to Cherry's, Nina heard the voice on the phone and felt it familiar.

Just as Nina searched in her mind who it was, the owner of the voice who had already appeared in front of her was striding towards them.

The two of them were stunned when their eyes met.

"Henry?"

"Mrs. Nina?"
