

My Wife is a beautiful Officer Chapter 971 - Chapter 970: A Villain (part three)

Chapter 971: Chapter 970: A Villain (part three)

"Wow, If you hadn't spoken just now, maybe I wouldn't have noticed how pretty and hot you are," Shaun said inappropriately. He reached out abruptly and tried to touch her pointed chin. Coco evaded his hand smartly. She had worked in the movie industry for many years, and met all sorts of people. She knew well how to protect herself from such dirtbags.

"You should leave, Mr. Gao. My cousin is sick. She won't talk, even if you keep yelling and embarrassing her," Coco said. She shed silent tears as she continued. "The doctors said that she is trapped in her own mind and is reluctant to talk to anybody but herself. Technically, she isn't sick. She has just locked herself up in the darkness, and it prevents anyone else from coming inside, or herself from coming outside." That also explained why Coco had gone to the Mu Mansion in anger, desperate to seek justice for her cousin.

"If she can't give me the answer that I urgently need, you should be the one to pay her debt, as her cousin. Am I not right?" Shaun said as he stared at Coco in lust. He realized he had seen her somewhere before, but couldn't remember the details.

Why should I do that? Leave, or I'll call the police," Coco cried. She didn't think she was capable of talking some sense into this bastard, nor of persuading him to leave Jessica's ward. She chose to ignore him, even though he had inflicted great damage to Jessica. However, she was shocked to find that he had the nerve to come to the hospital and accuse Jessica of being a slut.

"Call the police? Do it! I'll be happy to tell the police about how your cousin deceived me. Then, they will feel obliged to arrest a liar and put her in jail." Shaun sneered. Born into a wealthy and influential family, Shaun had never been afraid of the police. In his opinion, there was nothing that couldn't be dealt with a bank check, including crimes.

"So you have decided to stay here and harass two women?" Coco asked. This man was unbelievable. She took out her mobile phone from her coat pocket, determined to call the police. She swore to teach this son of a bitch a hard lesson.

"Yes, I'm sure that you will enjoy my company. By the way, have we met before? You look familiar to me," Shaun asked. He stepped closer to Coco, staring at her intensely and boldly as he tried to identify her.

"Sorry, but I don't think so. Please leave us alone right now," Coco replied coldly, although she was trying to stop herself from erupting like a volcano. She knew what Shaun was referring to. He must have seen her in some TV dramas she had worked on before.

"Wow! You're that star! Coco, am I right? You were popular once," Shaun said loudly, finally figuring out where he saw this woman before. Rich as he was, Shaun rarely had the opportunity to make friends with movie stars. He was spellbound to find Coco standing before him, talking to him in Jessica's ward.

"I'm sorry. You must have mistaken me for somebody else. I'm not any star," Coco answered awkwardly. She took a step backward. Shaun's breath smelled.

"Come on. You look just like her. It doesn't matter if you're not her. Come with me, serve me well and you will be paid well," Shaun told her. Coco's denial of her similarity to the movie star discouraged Shaun, but it made him forget why he had rushed to the hospital in the first place. Truthfully, he felt drawn to this beautiful woman already.

Do you intend to make me follow Jessica's footsteps and be your mistress? How dare you propose such an outrageous request? Leave. Right now!" Coco yelled. She walked to the door, pulling it open as she gestured toward it. "Get out."

"Babe, turn my offer down, and you'll regret it. You know, I have developed a habit. The more someone refuses me, the more aroused I get. Congratulations, you have successfully peaked my interest. You'll be mine one way or another," Shaun threatened her. He wouldn't be intimidated easily by Coco's refusal, so he laid his heart bare at Coco's feet.

"Who do you think you are? You can't just get whatever you want. Our paths won't ever cross again! And you surely won't own me, you arrogant bastard! Fuck right off," Coco said, grinding her teeth. She used to think that Edward was the most hideous man. Now, after meeting Shaun, she knew immediately, without a doubt, that this pretentious Shaun was the worst among all men.

Are you serious? Well then, I plan to sell your cousin to a brothel overseas so a hundred men can fuck her every day. Will you be fine with that?" Shaun said, as he walked over to Jessica and tried to lift her out of her bed.

"What do you think you are doing? How dare you treat a patient this way," Coco shouted, trembling in shock. She rushed to Jessica's side and helped her lie down on the bed again. She felt scared and wondered why her parents hadn't appeared yet. She was not capable enough to deal with such an evil man.

I can do whatever I want with your cousin. So, babe, will you come with me or not?" Shaun smirked at her tauntingly. He went behind Coco to circle his arms around her waist, while she was bending over to help Jessica. He started to grope her body.

"Bastard, let go of me," Coco screamed, horrified by Shaun's sudden assault right in front of Jessica, his former mistress and her cousin. They were inside a hospital room, for God's sake. She struggled to fight him.

"I won't release you until you give me a kiss." Shaun attempted to kiss Coco on the cheek. But before he could do that, he heard a cold voice. Suddenly, a briefcase was wedged between his mouth and Coco's cheek, preventing him from kissing her.

"I would let her go if I were you," Daisy said in a mocking tone. She looked at Shaun condescendingly, disgusted. She recognized him immediately, since they had met once before, back at the jewelry store.

Chapter 972: Chapter 971: Thank You For Saving Me (part one)

"Help me, Daisy!" Coco cried. This was the first time she was happy to see Daisy. In fact, she was overjoyed at her appearance. She didn't want to suffer the same misfortune as Jessica, and fall into the clutches of a man she didn't love. Without a doubt, Daisy's arrival was a singular moment of hope for her.

"What are YOU doing here?" Shaun had recognized Daisy. "And why are you in a uniform? Dressing up for Halloween, or what?" The moment he caught sight of her, he let go of Coco and turned, sizing her up in surprise. He thought it was a prank that she was dressed like a soldier. She struck him as an aloof stunner the other day. But right now, she hardly looked like the same person, and had a murderous look in her eyes.

"Are you all right?" Instead of giving him any response, Daisy bent down and helped Coco up. Coco was thoroughly flurried and had fallen to the ground once Shaun had let go of her. Luckily, she didn't get hurt. However, Daisy was stunned when she set her eyes on Jessica, who was staring ahead with a vacant expression on her face, paying no attention to Daisy or the chaos that had occurred right before her. Daisy hadn't expected her to be in such a serious condition, but she soon came to herself. After all, this was very much possible for someone who had suffered extreme physical and psychological violence. Only a twisted person could smile after all that had happened.

"Yes. Thank you," Coco replied. She said the words with sincerity. She knew that if it weren't for Daisy, who had come in between them just in time, the beast could have had his way with her by now and Coco would have been in a dangerous situation.

"Don't mention it. What happened to Jessica?" Daisy asked with a concerned look on her face. Although she had driven Coco away when she turned up at their house asking for an explanation for Jessica's mishap, Daisy thought it would be better to talk it through afterward. So, she asked Mr. Yi for the address of the hospital Jessica was admitted to, intending to pay her a visit. She reached there only to find Jessica and Coco once again in trouble.

"As you can see, she is completely locked up in a world of her own," Coco said, allowing herself a wry smile. When she spoke mildly, she wasn't the condescending and arrogant woman Daisy thought her to be. Right now, she seemed like an agreeable person to her.

"What did the doctor say? Is it curable?" Daisy asked, worried. She felt a sense of compassion upon hearing Coco's words. Lamenting Jessica's misfortune, she reached out and tucked Jessica's messy locks behind her ear. Daisy wondered if Jessica would have regretted doing those things, had she been in her right senses.

"Perhaps. But it won't be easy. It all depends on her own will power," Coco responded as she sighed. Somehow, she found herself obediently answering the questions Daisy had, something that had never happened before.

"Hey! How dare you two just ignore me?" Shaun was rather irritated. It seemed to him that he was being belittled by these women, while they were chatting freely without any fear of him.

"I would get out of here right away, if I were you. Or do you really want to be sent to the police station?" Daisy scoffed, fixing him with a stern look in her eyes. She thought he would be threatened and run away after seeing her in the uniform. But apparently, he was not at all aware of the threat right now. How bold of him to stay and challenge her!

"Don't tell me that you really are a Senior Colonel. I don't buy it. You look so young. I must remind you that you are breaking the law, pretending to be a soldier. Aren't you afraid of being sued or put behind bars?" Shaun mocked, checking her out from head to toe. He couldn't believe that one could hold such a high position at such a young age, not to mention a woman.

So you are claiming that I'm breaking the law and that you will send me to prison? Believe me, you should worry about your own safety in those regards, for now. Do you have any idea what you've done? It is called sexual assault. You wish to know how many years you will get for this?" Daisy asked, raising her head in contempt. However, Shaun was not intimidated by her words and still looked at her with lust. His sleaziness really disgusted her.

Don't take it the wrong way, chica. It was totally consensual. You can ask her if you don't believe me," Shaun said, giving Coco a baleful look. He was sure that she would not defy him, since Jessica was at his mercy.

"I don't know you at all, let alone appreciate physical contact with you in any form. You watch your tongue!" Coco retorted uncompromisingly. She felt quite fearless. She didn't think that Shaun would dare touch her again, with Daisy around.

"You don't? But I can tell that you enjoyed it very much," Shaun teased her with a wicked smile, glancing over Daisy and Coco lewdly. He couldn't get enough of their otherworldly beauty. They both were as cold as marble, but exuded entirely different kinds of charm, enough to make him fall head over heels. But if he must pick one between them, he preferred Daisy, because she looked so dignified and inaccessible in that uniform. It was exactly her unwillingness that aroused his desire to conquer her. Never before had he met a woman who dared to disguise herself as a soldier to threaten him.

"Nonsense! You shameless asshole!" Coco spluttered. Shaun's brazenness was way beyond her imagination, and the fact that he was actually the CEO of the Kompass Group seemed like a joke to her. The company could go bankrupt in months if it was handed over to him, she thought to herself in disdain.

"My beauty, duplicity is not a good virtue in a sweet girl like you," Shaun said to Coco, smiling roguishly at them like a total bum, with his hands in his pockets.

"So you are not leaving?" Daisy asked casually as she took out her phone. Generally speaking, she did not look down upon others so easily, but this Shaun was an exception.

"Why? Do you want to come along with me?" Shaun continued verbally harassing them. His lecherousness was thoroughly exposed. No matter what Daisy and Coco said to him, he teased them in a vulgar tone. He still reacted to Daisy casually, thinking that even if the uniform was not a prop and Daisy was truly a soldier, she was likely from a cultural troupe or some place like that. She could not pose a threat to him.

"No. But I can make sure that someone else will escort you out of here," Daisy replied, a sarcastic smile adorning her face as she dialed Mr. Yi's number.

"Hello, Colonel! Oh, no, Senior Colonel. Is there anything else I can do for you?" Mr. Yi asked enthusiastically after picking up the call. He had told her the address of the hospital not too long ago, so he wondered why she called him again. What could have happened? Could she have lost her way? That was impossible. The Municipal Hospital was located in the downtown area and wasn't hard to find at all. Besides, Hero was hospitalized in the same hospital after he attempted suicide, and she had been there to see him.

Chapter 973: Chapter 972: Thank You For Saving Me (part two)

"Mr. Yi, could you please send some of your men here to help me? We have a scumbag on our hands who is guilty of sexual harassment and assault. I think he should be arrested as soon as possible," Daisy said slowly, emphasizing each word. She wanted to deter Shaun from getting nearer. She also wanted to let Mr. Yi know the seriousness of the current situation, hoping that he could help get rid of this pervert as quickly as possible. Daisy didn't want to contaminate her own hands dealing with this reptile.

"What? How dare he? Don't worry, I will be there in a minute," Mr. Yi exclaimed, jumping to his feet. Fortunately, his police station was not far away from the Municipal Hospital, so they could get there within minutes.

"Great. I will be waiting for you." Daisy hung up the call when she finished speaking. She never doubted that Mr. Yi would cooperate and would even come here in person. After all, there would be plenty of occasions where he would ask for the army base to lend a hand. They certainly couldn't work alone in major incidents of violence.

Woman, must you go this far? Don't you try to scare me. I'm not afraid of you. I have done nothing wrong!" Shaun yelled. However, he was a bit hesitant, his pallor changing when he heard her words on the phone. Not knowing whether she had really made the call, he couldn't be sure if she truly sent for the police, or if she was simply putting on an act.

"Aren't you Shaun Gao, CEO of the Kompass Group? I heard that you graduated from Harvard, and were a top student back in school. Since you are so clever, it should be fairly easy for you to tell if I am just scaring you or really mean it," Daisy replied, her eyes narrowing at him. She suspected he had gotten his degree the illegitimate way the moment she had seen him.

"Wow, it seems like you know a lot about me. Let me guess, you have been curious about me from back when we met, and investigated on me in secret?" Although he was at a disadvantage at present, Shaun couldn't cease to make his advances. It was only natural that a lech like him had fallen into the trap set up by Jessica.

"Save it, sir. No offence, but you are a bit too revolting for me. Stop thinking so highly of yourself. I suggest that you just stay at home, in case your hideous face creeps people out," Daisy mocked. She rarely put people down with her words, but she found it necessary to teach Shaun a lesson and knock the stuffing out of him.

"It is just typical of you women to be too shy to reveal your true feelings. You say harsh words to conceal your passion. But no matter how severely you speak to me, I accept all your words with pleasure, since they come from the mouth of such a beauty." Being a powerful young man from a rich family, Shaun seemed to get too carried away. He was a total womanizer.

"Hah! That's a good one. I hope you can keep at it and still smile later on." Daisy sneered. She looked elsewhere, unwilling to cast a second glance at this nasty piece of man. No wonder Brian kept coming between her and Shaun back then. Daisy now understood that her brother was trying to protect her from this wicked man at the time.

"It is such an honor to have a chat with you beauties. So thrilling that it makes my blood hot!" It was evident that Shaun was a man-whore and was good at coming up with the desired words that women wanted to hear. He might be able to get what he wanted if it wasn't Daisy he was wooing. Our aloof Senior Colonel merely turned a deaf ear to his flattery.

"Yo ho! I didn't know that you are an expert, too. So you are also a thrill-seeker. Interested in hardcore stuff, huh?" Shaun misunderstood Daisy's words. He became as bold as brass, assuming that she was talking about sexual activities.

Daisy smiled at him meaningfully and made no response. She glanced at her watch. The police station was only a few minutes away, so if things went smoothly, Mr. Yi and his men would be here to apprehend this sleazy man any minute.

"Just leave this pervert alone, Daisy. I've never met someone as filthy as him," Coco said, rolling her eyes at Shaun. She now suspected that Jessica had been drugged and lost her mind. Otherwise, she couldn't think of any other reason Jessica was willing to be together with this dirty man.

"I can see that, too. Even the air seems contaminated because of him," Daisy echoed. She frowned and swatted her hand deliberately in front of her, as if trying to repel the filthy air and the person who polluted it.

"Call me bad names if you like. I'm totally fine with that. You women always act this way. You first pretend to be noble, reserved ladies and try everything you can to push men away, but when promised money, all of you show your true colors and turn into the bitches you are!" Shaun shrugged. He was not mad at their sarcastic tone at all. Instead, he continued to flirt, making no attempts to conceal his smirk.

Daisy bit her lip. She was a bit offended this time. It was clear by the expression on her face. However, she resisted the urge to lunge at him. To be honest, she would only get her hands dirty by touching him, and she didn't want that. She had better leave him in the hands of Mr. Yi. Shaun didn't deserve her precious energy.

Just then, Mr. Yi rushed in with a group of constables. He had no problem locating them, since he knew where Jessica's ward was.

"You are quick enough, Mr. Yi," Daisy said sincerely with a smile, as she looked at the time. They reached here in less than ten minutes. He hadn't failed to meet her expectations.

"Sorry, Senior Colonel, We are late." Mr. Yi, however, made an apology immediately. He did not accept her compliment, for he feared that she was actually reproaching them ironically. He thought it was always a safer choice to be humble toward his superiors.

"Never mind. See that scumbag over there? I want him out of my face right now," Daisy said in a cold, hard voice after the greetings. She was completely fed up with Shaun and didn't even want to look at him anymore.

"So he is the criminal you mentioned on the phone? As far as I remember, he is one of Mr. Mu's partners, isn't he?" Mr. Yi asked with hesitation. He was taken aback when he realized that the man was Shaun Gao. The newspapers reported that FX International Group bought the stakes of Kompass Group recently, so Mr. Yi knew a bit about this man. However, since Shaun was not a local, he only knew him from the news.

Chapter 974: 973: Thank You For Saving Me (part three)

"So what? Their cooperation has nothing to do with me. I don't care who he is, he should be brought to justice since he has committed a crime. Or is it Edward whom you fear, you think that he would get angry over this?" Daisy fumed. Of course, she knew that Edward's company had recently become Kompass Group's shareholder, but it was not a bilateral or even a friendly cooperation. It all started when Shaun crossed the line and vexed Edward. In doing so, Shaun woke up the sleeping lion and got kicked in the teeth.

No, no. That is not what I meant! I was just wondering whether you two are acquainted." Mr. Yi explained hastily, with a flattering smile on his face. He immediately straightened his expression and wheeled around to glare at Shaun.

"So you are Mr. Yi? You see, here is an honest and law-abiding man standing in front of you. I'm actually a friend of the Senior Colonel! What happened just now is merely a misunderstanding," Shaun said, raising his hands. He was still in shock, hearing that Daisy was indeed a Senior Colonel. It was not until he saw Mr. Yi and the constables arrive that he realized that the call Daisy made was not a fake one intended only to scare him away.

"Sorry, but since the Senior Colonel called the police, we have to do our duty. Please understand and cooperate. You can still try and defend yourself at the station. But I need to warn you that you'd better not think of getting away with this. It is Edward Mu's wife whom you have offended, and there will be a price to pay. So I suggest that you put away all your unrealistic ideas and come with us," Mr. Yi warned Shaun sharply. It was unclear whether or not he said this only to intimidate Shaun. Possibly, he truly attached great seriousness to this matter. But one thing was clear, Shaun was more angry than frightened as he heard his words. He was alarmed to know that Daisy was Edward's woman. 'That hateful and infuriating Edward!' He loathed him even more now. 'How come he possesses all the best things in the world, including this beauty in front of him?' he wondered.

"What did you just say, Mr. Yi? You mean she is the wife of that bastard? Edward Mu, from FX International Group?" Shaun flared up at Edward's name, not paying attention to his speech. His true nature as an arrogant, rich man was obvious for anyone to see.

"How dare you insult Mr. Mu, you rascal! Now hurry up, unless you want to be tied up and forced out of here!" Mr. Yi snapped, staring at Shaun grimly. He was always polite to the wealthy and powerful people in the city, but he dared not act that way when Daisy was around.

Although Mr. Yi appeared to take her side, Daisy took his words to mean something else. From how he put it, it seemed to her that Edward could do whatever he liked. He was pleased to punish his enemies, and would pay no attention to the law in the process. Daisy feared that Mr. Yi knew the secrets of the Mu family. He wouldn't have spoken like that otherwise. Whatever it was, she would not let down her guard when dealing with this man in the future.

Senior Colonel, now if you will excuse us, we'd like to take him to the police station," Mr. Yi uttered resolutely, with utmost respect. He noticed Daisy thinking intently when he mentioned Edward, and realized that he should have put his foot in his mouth. Embarrassed, he could think of nothing else to say. What was more, it would be rash to give a response before he figured out the specific reason for her displeasure. Therefore, he decided to take Shaun away at once, in case he further disgruntled her.

Sure. Thank you very much, Mr. Yi. Sorry to have troubled you with such a trifle. It is so kind of you to have come here personally. You could simply have sent some of your men to get it settled, you know," Daisy responded with a faint smile as she looked at Mr. Yi mildly. She seemed to have softened, although Mr. Yi could still see the chill in her eyes.

"It is my pleasure. I'll leave then. Call me if anything else turns up," Mr. Yi said, bowing. Judging from his past experiences, Mr. Yi felt that Daisy was quite an easy-going person. That was why he didn't always watch his mouth when he cottoned up to her. But her frigidness today served as a warning to him. He shuddered at the possibility that he might have left a bad impression on her.

"Goodbye." Daisy nodded. She frowned at Mr. Yi's back. To be honest, she wasn't blaming him for what he said about Edward. Being a prudent person, she was only worrying that he talked with the tongue in the cheek. Worse still, it could mean that he knew Jonathan was the leader of Mayfly.

Well... thank you for coming and saving me today," Coco said after they left. Shaun had finally been taken away. Though he was still foul-mouthed and was swearing all the way, it was a great relief for her to get rid of him.

"You are welcome," Daisy replied. "Actually, I'm here to clear the air about Jessica's accident. I promised that I would give you an answer, and I must tell you that my mother-in-law was never involved in this, from the very beginning." She took out a pile of documents from her briefcase. It was evidence that she had collected in the last few days, including relevant materials and printed screenshots from video clips. It was a great deal of work, but Daisy had to keep her word, since she promised Coco an explanation. "Actually, the police have told us everything, and I know now that it wasn't Cynthia's fault. I am so sorry for my impudence that day," Coco apologized. To show that she meant it, Coco took the documents from Daisy, although she did not need them anymore. It was true that she could be haughty sometimes, but she knew it was necessary to show her gratitude in this case.

Glad to know that. Anyway, I hope that Jessica will recover soon. Now that we have cleared the misunderstanding, I think it's time that I get out of your way. Just take good care of her. As for Shaun, I will try my best to make sure that he won't bother you again in future." Daisy handled the situation gracefully. Others might not think of responding to hatred with kindness. Her reaction was enough to make her enemies feel ashamed and put them out of countenance.

"So... you don't hate Jessica? Not even a little bit?" Coco asked in confusion. She was very surprised at Daisy's generosity. Under the circumstances, Daisy could readily seize the opportunity to add insult to the injury. But she hadn't. To top it all off, she was willing to help them. It was completely beyond Coco's expectations.

"You won't believe me if I say no. And I will despise myself if I lie. I won't pretend that I have forgiven her already. But I won't lose myself to the grudge, either. It won't help anything, will it? After all, Jessica is getting penalized now. That is enough for me." Daisy smiled helplessly. According to Coco, her good heart added to her charm, for she looked as beautiful as an angel with the small smile on her face.

Chapter 975: 974: Burying The Hatchet (part one)

"Still, thanks for burying the hatchet. I know we've had our differences. Hell, we've done a pretty good job of hurting you, especially Jessica. Seeing things from her perspective, I get it. The guy who was by her side for so long dumped her. She couldn't take it and did some pretty fucked up things to you. It won't be easy to forgive her, and I won't ask you to. And...and I'm ashamed to ask anything more."

Coco bit her lips and bowed her head in shame, her arrogant manner fading fast. It was not difficult as she had thought to say these words to Daisy. Really, she felt like a great burden had been lifted from her shoulders. The more grudges she bore, the more harm that would do to her. It was needless to keep them in her heart any more. Just let bygones be bygones.

Thanks, Miss Coco. I'm glad we can solve this like mature adults, rather than by picking at each other while chasing insane revenge fantasies. Happy to hear it." To Daisy it was better to make friends than enemies. Since she admitted they were wrong, there was no reason to dwell on it. The past was the past. She was a soldier and wouldn't be that petty.

"It's over, Daisy. It's time we faced facts and realized we did a lot of things wrong. I don't think my cousin's going to be bothering you anymore, anyway. We people can't act against the law of nature." Coco glanced at Jessica. Her cousin's eyes were flat and her face was impassive, showing no emotion to anyone, even to Coco. She felt very sad at the thought that her aunt had gone completely nuts, and now her cousin Jessica also lost her mind. They paid for their crimes, and only God knew what fate awaited her.

"She's lucky to have you. You've been by her side the whole time, even though she can't do anything to thank you now. To be honest, I didn't think much of you before. But I've changed my mind after seeing how much you care for her. I'm sorry all this went down this way." Though Daisy wasn't responsible for Jessica's condition, she still felt a little uneasy. She remembered how furious Jonathan was a few days ago. The senior colonel shuddered to think about what would have happened if she hadn't convinced Edward's father to let it go. He didn't do anything, and she knew it was for her sake. Because of this, Daisy felt very grateful to Jonathan.

"We grew up together, how could I leave her alone? Probably a good thing that she ended up like this. She doesn't care about anything anymore. Nothing can hurt her while she's trapped in here." She pointed to Jessica's head. It was late autumn, when everyone was somewhat depressed anyway. Coco's words were all the more pathetic, given the general mood.

"Take care. If you need any help, please call me. I'll do what I can." This was what Daisy was like. She was gracious to a fault, sometimes setting aside her principles to do what she thought was right. But this was also the precious part of her heart. The saying goes, "a weak person is liable to be bullied; a tamed horse is often ridden." But if everyone thought like this, this world would be a cruel one indeed in which compassion was seen as a weakness. It was far better to care for others, and use that as strength.

"Okay, sure. Bye," Coco said while reaching out her hand. For the first time, she felt willing to be close to Daisy and touch her. So she wore a gentle smile and looked at Daisy with expectant eyes.

"Bye!" Daisy returned with an reassuring smile. At the same time, she reached out her hand and slightly shook hands with her. This handshake melted all the grudges they held against each other before. It would never come to them that they would never meet each other hence. It was not until many years later when they brushed past each other that they would suddenly find that time was so transient to them.

After Daisy walked out of the hospital, she felt sympathy for Coco and her family. She was upset, and tears started to form. She used to think that it was just karmic justice that Jessica was suffering now, that all those people who had crossed her were paying the price. But when she saw Jessica's miserable condition with her own eyes, she began to feel pity on her. Daisy was an ordinary woman who would feel sad about such thing, not a goddess who had no emotions and desires and would always remain untouched. With the weekend coming, Leena followed Kevin on his road trip to the capital city. Because they brought Lee with them, they decided to drive instead of flying. All of them had licenses and they could take turns behind the wheel. Today, the car they chose to drive was the Audi Pikes Peak Quattro S1 instead of the Humvee. Because Kevin was on leave now, he didn't want to use an official military vehicle. That didn't matter, for they had plenty of cars for transportation at home. Leena alone had two cars at her disposal. Because the Quattro had four-wheel drive, and based on an electro-mechanical multi-plate clutch four-wheel drive system, it would be more than adequate for the road trip they had planned. It drove beautifully.

Looking out the window at the scenery passing by, Leena was eagerly anticipating this road trip. She'd finally get to meet his family. And, of course, she was quite nervous at the same time. Although Kevin assured her again and again that his parents were sensible people, she still felt worried that they wouldn't like her.

"What's wrong? Are you tired?" Kevin glanced at his wrist and checked the time. Because they were on a very tight schedule, they got up early this morning. Kevin worried that Leena might not be used to getting up so early for a trip. But for him, it was a regular thing.